

1

Machine learning is the study of algorithm and statistical models that computer systems use to perform a specific task without using explicit instructions, relying on patterns and inference instead.

2

Mitochondria is the power house of the cell.