

An ecosystem is defined as a structural and functional unit of biosphere consisting of community of living beings and the physical environment both interacting between them it include plants, animals, people and others